

HealthKit's Statement on Apple's iPhone and iOS8 Launch

September 8, 2014 - HealthKit is in discussions with Apple, but these discussions are still ongoing. In good faith, HealthKit will not comment at this point in time.

HealthKit is a global platform for doctors and patients around the world, with its first US and Australian customers signing up in 2012. Two years after its 2012 launch, HealthKit has healthcare practitioners from 40 different countries using its practice management software, and it is expanding its patient services. HealthKit was founded by Alison Hardacre and Lachlan Wheeler (photo).

HealthKit saves its practitioner base an estimated total of 30,000 hours of administration per month, which they can use to treat more patients, so more people can get the treatment they need. Over the next six months, HealthKit is expanding its platform, growing its patient services and expanding its offering into different languages.
